All hands were “in” as partners to the Master Waste Water Recovery Plan recently met on the shores of Swan Lake.

Engineering consultants have begun the scope of work to explore options for waste water recovery in the study area (Swan Lake Commercial Corridor, South Spallumcheen Industrial and Commercial area (existing and proposed) and portions of the Okanagan Indian Band).

“This partnership provides an opportunity to protect Swan Lake and its surrounding wetlands,” said Township of Spallumcheen Mayor Janice Brown. “The ability to recover waste water creates a wide range of economic development opportunities”, added Directors Bob Fleming and Mike Macnabb.

The Partners welcome the opportunity to build relationships with surrounding governments. “It’s great to be working with our neighbours,” said Chief Louis. “More funding opportunities arise when small governments stop competing for provincial and federal grant dollars and start collaborating.”

Further details will be available as the Plan develops.
